

Rob Georg - Time For Some Ink

Rob Georg is an artist and songwriter based in Germany. He has a very unique creative approach. His music often blurs the lines between different genres. From the timelessness of country music, down to the grit of southern rock, anything goes!

Recently, the artist set out to release a brand new single. The new project is titled “Time For Some Ink” and it has been released with a matching music video. One of the most amazing features of this particular release is definitely the fact that the production value is absolutely astonishing. In other words, the sound is balanced, clear, and warm at the same time. There is a lot of energy to this performance, and Rob is a very inspired Artist who knows what it takes to create songs that connect with the audience on a much deeper level.

“Time For Some Ink” definitely belongs to this category. In particular, this song is an anthem for tattoo lovers. It is a celebration of the culture around tattooing, and it is all about what ink means for so many people out there. Some of us get tattooed in order to remember people. Others, they wanna tell their stories or even show their passion. Many more long to pay tribute to their culture or their social groups. The possibilities are truly endless, and each tattoo is a special look into a person’s heart and soul.

Falling somewhere in between the energy of rock and the appeal of country, this release is a perfect calling card for Rob, because it showcases the artist’s broad creative range and ability to combine different styles in a very seamless and open way.

Rob truly outdid himself on this one, striking a strong balance between timeless production value, great recordings, and more importantly, a performance that is inspired, and that also inspires!

Ultimately, this is a winning release, which offers the right balance of sonic excellence, songwriting mastery, and passion. You can instantly connect with the honesty and with the spontaneity of this project, and Rob’s tracks will instantly make their way into your heavy rotation.

This beautiful song perfectly captures the meaning of the lyrics, not only with words but also with sounds. The rhythm is slow and dense, with a nice psychedelic tone. I love the big, dark sound of the guitars and the amazing slide lines, which bring so much depth and texture to this release. Rob’s vocals are truly amazing because they bring so much vibe and liveliness to the track. The guitars are massive and truly gigantic, creating a wall of sound along with the pounding drums. In addition to that, Rob’s lyrics are earnest and straightforward. He talks about his passion for tattoos, as well as poking at the social stigmas that still come with tattooed people throughout the world. The song features a blistering guitar solo, with a sick wah wah effect, and it is definitely one of the highlights of the arrangement. I love lyrics such as “the pain is real, but I am getting a new one as soon as this one heals.” It really speaks to those who are passionate about tattoos (me included) and just can’t wait for the rush of getting another one! Rob himself is a purveyor of amazing tattoos. In fact, he has got quite an amazing collection of astonishing artworks on his own skin! Rob’s video is quite cinematic, and in addition to showing sequences from his performances, the track also showcases scenes from the tattoo studio, as Rob is getting another amazing piece done.

Ultimately, you’ll love this track if you are a fan of artists like Black Angels, Kyuss, as well as Kid Rock, Lynyrd Skynyrd, and many more! What I love about “Time For Some Ink” is definitely the fact that the song maintains a modern vibe, while also tipping the hat off to some of the best 70s southern rock vibes ever!
